

Evidence-based practice: Resources and tips for NQPs

Taking an evidence-based approach to practice is part of the HCPC standards. To find out how the RCSLT can support you with this throughout your career, take a look at these tips or visit rslt.info/ebp

- ✓ The RCSLT provides guidance in over 30 clinical areas to promote good practice, based on clinical and professional expertise: rslt.info/clinical-guidance
- ✓ We also develop guidance to support the delivery of quality services, for example, advice about telehealth and addressing health inequalities: rslt.info/delivery-guidance
- ✓ RCSLT members have access to a wide range of journals via our website: rslt.info/journals
- ✓ The RCSLT supports two databases designed to bring together evidence about speech and language therapy interventions:
 - speechBITE
 - What WorksASHA's Evidence Maps are another great tool for finding relevant evidence.
- ✓ Joining a clinical excellence network (CEN) is a great way to access development opportunities and learn from other members: rslt.info/CENs
- ✓ The RCSLT Online Outcome Tool \(ROOT\) is free for members, so that they can collect and analyse clinical data, to inform their practice.
- ✓ There are a range of great e-learning courses at www.rsltcpd.org.uk. Topics include evidence-based practice, reading a research paper and clinical decision-making.
- ✓ The RCSLT has developed a collection of interactive scenarios on a wide range of topics to support you to consider how you may approach different situations in practice: rslt.info/ProfDevScenarios
- ✓ If you are keen to be research active in your career, take a look at the range of research networks available to support you.